Our Team

Our maternal transport team consists of a critical care nurse, labor and delivery nurse, respiratory therapist, and an EMT, collaborating seamlessly to deliver specialized care tailored to the individual needs of both the mother and baby. Supported by a team of high-risk care coordinators and transport nurses, you will receive updates on your patient's progress and remain fully informed throughout her care journey. When the situation necessitates transferring your patient to a higher level of maternal-fetal and neonatal care, you can rely on the expertise and resources available at Texas Children's Pavilion for Women.

Why Texas Children's Pavilion for Women?

As a referring physician, you can have confidence knowing your high-risk patients will be in the best hands when transporting them to the Pavilion for Women.

The Pavilion for Women is home to one of the nation's few labor and delivery based ICUs dedicated solely to critical care obstetrics, including the following complications of pregnancy:

- Fetal intervention
- Placenta Accreta Spectrum
- Hypertensive disorders
- Cardiology and fetal cardiology
- Diabetes and other endocrine disorders
- Hematology and oncology
- Autoimmune disorders

Patients also have immediate access to Texas Children's Fetal Center[®], level IV maternal care and level IV neonatal intensive care, as well as all subspecialty programs including Texas Children's Heart Center, recently ranked #1 in the nation for pediatric cardiology and heart surgery by U.S. News & World Report.
